MANAGEMENT BASICS

Research reports show that 87% of managers admitted to feeling unprepared for their role when they initially took it on. Additionally, a staggering 92% of managers believe that they could benefit from further training.

It is therefore evident that there is a significant need to provide additional training and support to managers, particularly those who are early in their management journey.

Insufficient management training can lead to heightened stress levels for managers, negatively impacting their performance and that of their teams. Moreover, it can result in previously high-performing individuals feeling overwhelmed and ultimately deciding to leave the organisation.

It is crucial to address this issue to ensure your managers are given the tools to thrive in the role and contribute positively to organisational success.
